STRUCTURE OF HIGHER EDUCATION SYSTEM

Description:

The higher education system consists of Public Universities, Universities of Technology, Comprehensive Universities (offering both University of Technology and University programmes) and a College sector. The Higher Education Act (December 1997) provides for the appointment of a Registrar of Private Higher Education Institutions and a number of private institutions have registered or are in the process of registering in terms of these provisions. The South African universities offer Bachelor's, Bachelor's Honours, Master's and Doctorate Degrees, as well as Undergraduate and Postgraduate Diplomas. Course work is structured in modules, with students registering in a unit/credit system. Universities and Universities of Technology, as autonomous institutions, are subsidized by the Department of Education, and provide training at the post senior certificate level. University of Technology courses lead to National Diplomas and Certificates and, as from 1995, to Degrees with a minimum duration of four years. The Higher Education Act stipulates that higher education at Universities, Universities of Technology and Colleges comes directly under the responsibility of the national government, whilst further education colleges report to the nine provincial governments.

Stages of studies:

University level first stage: First stage

The Bachelor's degree is awarded by Universities, Comprehensive Universities and Universities of Technology. Universities and Comprehensive Universities award the Bachelor's degree after three to six years of study: Humanities, Commerce, Science - three years; Agriculture, Law, Engineering, Pharmacy and Education, four years; Veterinary Medicine and Architecture, five years; Dentistry, five-and-a-half years; Medicine and Theology, six years. Students in Humanities, Commerce and Science wishing to proceed to a Master's degree are required to take a Bachelor's (Honours) degree, which is awarded after a further year's study. Universities of Technology award the Bachelor's degree of Technology (BTech), which is a one-year degree following a diploma that includes one year of practical training. Universities also confer a Professional Bachelor's degree after four years.

University level second stage: Second stage

The Master's degree is awarded by Universities, Comprehensive Universities and Universities of Technology. This degree requires a minimum of one to two years' research after the award of an Honours degree in the case of universities, and a Bachelor's degree in the case of Universities of Technology. The Master's degree in Technology (MTech) may be obtained at least one year after the BTech. This is an advanced qualification comprising taught subjects and research, or only research. The thesis must relate to an industry-specific problem. Some university Master's degrees, e.g. the Master's degree in Business Leadership (MBusAdministration), are partly taught and partly research degrees, where the thesis must relate to an industry or subject specific problem.

University level third stage: Third stage

Doctorates and research degrees are also awarded by Universities, Comprehensive Universities and Universities of Technology. They are conferred to holders of Master's degrees after a minimum of two years' study. A Doctor in Technology (DTech) is awarded after successful completion of a thesis at Universities of Technology. This degree is research-based and studies last for at least two years. It comprises an advanced research project.

Distance higher education:

Distance teaching, which is mainly by correspondence, provides courses for about 35 per cent of enrolled students. The University of South Africa (UNISA) offers correspondence courses, either in English or in Afrikaans, for Bachelor's degrees and Postgraduate qualifications, provided such Bachelor's degrees include an in-service training component. Course work is structured in modules. A maximum of ten years is allowed to obtain a Bachelor's degree, an additional year for an Honours degree, three years for Postgraduate qualifications, two further years for a Master's degree and two years for a Doctorate. The degrees are considered to be equivalent in standard to those awarded by other Universities.

ADMISSION TO HIGHER EDUCATION

Admission to non university higher education studies:

Name of secondary school credential required: Senior Certificate

For entry to: Universities of technology, further education and training colleges, and other colleges.

Alternatives to credentials: Senior Certificate with N-courses obtained at technical colleges or technical high schools.

Admission to university-level studies:

Name of secondary school credential required: Senior Certificate

Minimum score/requirement: Pass marks in two Higher Grade languages, two additional Higher Grade subjects, at least a further Standard Grade subject and a minimum aggregate of 45% for six subjects.

For entry to: Universities.

Alternatives to credentials: Certificate of exemption from the matriculation endorsement required as issued by the Matriculation Board on behalf of HESA or a conditional admission certificate issued by a university of technology.

Entrance exams required: Matriculation endorsements are required for admission to first degree studies at university level and senior certificates for first degree studies at university of technology or college level.

Foreign students admission:

Admission requirements: Prospective students coming from a non-South African schooling system must, for benchmark purposes, hold qualifications that must be at least equivalent to the local system. For university studies, candidates apply to the university which will forward the application to the Matriculation Board which issues a certificate of exemption in terms of other specified provisions. Conditions must be satisfied on completion of degrees in the case of foreign conditional exemption certificates.

Entry regulations: Students must hold a valid passport, a duly completed B1-159 application form that is available from the Department of Home Affairs, a standard letter of provisional acceptance to a South African institution, a letter of motivation and proof that the student is in a situation to pay the tuition fees and has adequate means of support.

Language requirements: Students must be proficient in English or Afrikaans.
